Edgar Morris, according to reports, seemed to delight in breaking up religious meetings. Some weeks ago he entered a Dunkard crurch, stopped the preacher in the midst of his sermon, led him down the aisle and kicked him out of the door. More recently, it is said, he caught an old Confederate veteran, named Snow, along the roadside and cut off his long heard with a pocket knife.

On April 1st, because of the lower cost of raw materials, the price of Lankford Humane Horse Collars will be reduced. This reduction comes in time for jobbers, merchants and farmers to profit by it. On thousands of farms this year the land has been so wet that most furrows have not been turned. Horses have not had their heavy spring plowing to do.

Both merchants and jobbers have small stocks of collars. They have been buying only for their immediate needs. Many have no stock at all. This is shown by the fact that we have thousands of requests from farmers to supply them because they couldn't get Lankford Collars any other way. Merchants and jobbers can now re-stock with perfect security. There will be no further price reduction this season. We guarantee our price against any decline until August 1, 1919.

Backed By Our $50,000 Advertising Campaign

The farmer demand for Lankford Collars this year is greater than ever before. More and more they are being used in preference to heavy, costly leather.

This year we are spending on our advertising campaign $50,000. The biggest and best farm papers throughout the United States are being used to tell about the advantages of these collars made of cotton-these collars which heal galls while the horse works.

Our ads are appearing in every important Southern farm paper. We are using nothing but page advertisements in two colors.

The response has been tremendous. Every day brings us scores of orders from farmers who cannot get the collars at their local merchants because merchants have rightly been afraid to

We want these orders to be filled by the merchants of the South and by the jobbers. Because of the lateness of the spring and the unusual demand, merchants can be sure of disposing of their stock. They can buy with the assurance that they have reached the rock-bottom price for this season.

Discard Slow Selling Lines ---Stock Lankfords

Merchants do not want to stock heavily with merchandise when there is a possibility that prices may drop. If they stock lines which sell slowly and prices fall, this is sure to mean a big

The wise merchants are discarding slow selling lines. Where they once sold three brands they now sell one.

They are selecting the advertised fast selling brands which will be disposed of rapidly—which mean no capital tied up in dead stock. Instead of selling several kinds of cotton collars, stock one. Stock the Lankford because it is the advertised collar that a million farmers demand.

You don't have to push Lankfords so hard because our advertising induces users to pull them off of your shelves. You are too busy with all of your various lines to push any one brand. You need merchandise that sells.

Because of the price reduction and the advertising which we are doing, you can order Lankfords in perfect safety. Don't let the thousands of dollars worth of business which you could do slip through your fingers.

Our factories at Atlanta and Memphis can handle orders for quick shipment. Write, wire or phone your order now.
